Isn't it time to get over the misguided suit against Microsoft? there are far more important situations that cost taxpayers and consumers much more than software. The energy and tax dollars spent to pursue a competitive company has been a debacle. Self serving competitors and their legislators have made a mockery of our capitalist system.

Put this to bed and work on things that matter-energy prices, like automotive gasoline for example- talk about collaborative price levels! There you have a monopoly of many, all propping up prices- definitely not supply and demand driven.

I don't work for Microsoft nor do any of my relatives.
